

HILLTOWN BOARD RETURNS BIDS TO ALL CONTRACTORS

Directors Served With Papers in Equity Proceedings in School Fight

PLANS AT STANDSTILL

Meeting Adjourns After Estimates Are Returned To The Bidders

Plans for the erection of a $100,000 high school building in Hilltown township were temporarily delayed when the Hilltown Board of Education, in special session Monday night, failed to open bids which had been entered by more than a score of contractors.

There was tense silence in the Blooming Glen school auditorium as harassed school directors conferred with Attorney Mark Thatcher concerning a bill in equity filed in the office of the prothonotary at the Court House, Doylestown, asking court action to restrain the board from continuing with the building project.

Nearly a hundred people, including contractors' representatives and members of the Hilltown Taxpayers' Association were in the assembly room when Attorney Thatcher confirmed a rumor that official papers in the proceedings had been served on directors late yesterday by a deputy sheriff.

"In view of this action," he said, addressing the contractors, "it is unadvised to hold the bids unopened, and yet they must not be opened."

Director Harvey Baum then made a motion that the bids be returned unopened to those who tendered them. The motion carried and the proposals were returned. A list of all contractors submitting prices was made by the board secretary.

Several contractors said they would not destroy their estimates, but would hold them for resubmission. Several seemed to accept the situation in good humor, stating that they were accustomed to such delays. A few were disgruntled and stated they will not submit additional bids.

The petition to the court was filed yesterday with the prothonotary by Attorney Harry Grim, of Perkasie, representing William O. Schell, a taxpayer.

The bill of complaint alleges irregularities on the part of the board in preparing to float a loan to finance the new building and also attacks plans and specifications drawn for the proposed building.

Hilltown township has been the scene of bitter factional warfare for several months. When the board announced that the new building was to be erected on a plot of ground near Blooming Glen, in one corner of the township, a group of citizens banded together, formed the Hilltown Taxpayers' Association, and protested against the location, demanding a central location.

Since that time there have been numerous charges brought against the directors, four of whom are under indictment at the present time for alleged malfeasance in office.

TO ORGANIZE ALUMNI

YARDLEY, May 20.—Prof. Warren R. Smith, of Yardley school, will hold a meeting this evening at 8 o'clock, at the high school, for the purpose of organizing a Yardley high school alumni. All graduates of the school who can attend are urged to do so, and bring others.

SECOND PERIOD OF COURIER DRIVE CLOSING IN FOUR DAYS

Next Few Days Spell Opportunity to Candidates in Big Gift Campaign; Biggest Remaining Vote Offer Closes on Monday

Now that the second period big vote schedule is rapidly drawing to a close, the more ambitious candidates seem to be getting back into their old stride of getting votes and subscriptions, and frankly, that is what all those who have a desire to land one of the larger awards should be doing. The most important part of the entire campaign is now at hand, these next few days before the close of the largest remaining vote period.

Four More Days

Four more days! The three words have a mighty big meaning when we consider the importance of the results of The Courier's Big Gold Circulation Drive, which is rapidly nearing its conclusion.

The last of the big votes will undoubtedly be the deciding factor in determining the winners of the splendid array of gifts which have dazzled the eyes of the entire community because of their exceptional value.

Who is your favorite candidate? For several weeks the candidates have been busily engaged in accumulating votes and during this time the big campaign has gained fame that is wide-spread. This is the most liberal prize-winning event ever inaugurated in this section of Pennsylvania.

Many Attend Card Party For Fourth Ward Girls

The card party held last evening in Hibernian Hall on Corson street, for the benefit of the Fourth Ward girls, proved to be quite successful. Eleven tables of card players were arranged, comprising four tables of "500" and seven tables of pinochle. Seven games were played. The prizes were numerous and useful. Mrs. Margaret Green was high in the game of "500" with a score of 4110 and she selected an aluminum kettle. Neil McDevitt, with a score of 690 chose an end table. Other prize winners and their scores were:

MAY ERECT TOWN HALL IN LANGHORNE BOROUGH

Site and Stone to Be Donated If the Plan is Accepted

ASKS PUBLIC'S OPINION

LANGHORNE, May 20.—In an endeavor to learn what organizations of the borough of Langhorne are interested and will cooperate in the erection of a new town hall or auditorium, Langhorne Sorosis has appointed a committee to investigate the advisability of the project.

Committee named by Sorosis includes Mrs. Arthur Hagar, retiring president of the club as chairman; Mrs. Walter Shaw, Mrs. Henry Parry, Mrs. Harry Williams, Mrs. Edgar Frutcher, Mrs. Charles Edgerton.

Letters have been sent by this committee to 22 organizations in Langhorne in an endeavor to learn to just what extent said groups are interested in the affair. These associations have been requested, if the proposed project is thought favorable by the membership, to signify same, and state if representatives will be appointed to gather in an open meeting, date to be decided upon later.

The Sorosis members state they feel that a new town auditorium is needed, but are of the opinion this is a civic project, and that all organizations and groups should be considered and have a voice in the matter.

To date 10 organizations have replied to the communications, the majority expressing a desire to learn more about the project in a mass meeting.

Should a new town hall be looked upon with favor and plans made for its construction, a lot is at the disposal of the groups backing the affair. The site of same is not made public at this time, although it is stated the plot is near the center of the town. Promise has also been given for sufficient amount of stone for the foundation.

COLOR, MUSIC AND RHYTHM COMBINE TO MAKE SECOND ANNUAL MAY DAY FETE A SUCCESS; MISS SUE YOUNG IS CROWNED AS THE QUEEN

Children from All Schools of Bristol in Bright-Hued Garments Participate in Dance Numbers—Garden Scene is Well Presented—Numerous Spectators

Color, music, rhythm—thus might the second May Day Fete of Bristol Girls' Week be summed up.

The ideal setting for the Spring fete, Grundy's park; the warm, clear afternoon; the number of children and young women participating; all pointed to a large gathering to witness the event, and those in charge of yesterday afternoon's affair were not disappointed.

With great ceremony, followed by her retinue of attendants, was Miss Sue Young, of Edgely, crowned by the May Queen of 1930, Miss Gertrude Roberts.

Throughout the program the idea of the planting and growing of a flower garden was carried out, and the unusual manner in which the actions were expressed formed a basis for a most charming and colorful presentation.

Children from all of the schools of Bristol participated, having been coached in the numerous dances by their teachers during the past several days. Costumes, which required much thought and originality, were well planned and formed. Proud of their garments were the girls, and well might they be.

Promptly at 2.30 o'clock, the Queen, Miss Young, made her appearance on the greenward. The maid of honor was Miss Lellis Kattenbach. The royal robes of the queen were of white, as was also her bouquet of blossoms. The queen of 1930 was likewise garbed in white; while the maid of honor wore a gown of Nile green.

Adding an aspect of frivolity to the day was the jester, Miss Elizabeth Phillips, who in a clown's suit of orange and black; with heavy rimmed spectacles, frolicked about the park with a dog.

The herald, Miss Olive Whyatt, was costumed in a suit of dark blue velvet, edged with gold.

Members of the queen's court were: Thelma Wallace, Leota Campbell, Mildred Dyer, Isabelle Nills, Evelyn Koch, Mildred Heilyer, Anna Corn, Hazel Arrison, Alethea Myers, Betty Hill, Lillian Popkin, Esther Bair, Mary Morganti, Madelon Clay, Rita Barnfield, Dorothy Dugan. These young women presented pleasing appearance in their organdie frocks, four each of pink, orchid, peach and blue. The long full folds of the skirts, and the cut of the costumes, likewise made for a royal appearance. Each carried an arm bouquet of mixed flowers.

The crown bearer, was Miss Nellie Brown; train bearers, Betty Albright and Edith Tomlinson. Flower girls included: Anne Bayer, Eunice Ferguson, Evelyn Shores, Gladys Godshall, Rena Pratt, Jean Smith, Helen Van-Aken, Esther Paoletti.

The attendants of the queen gathered about the throne dais during the course of the many dances which were exceptionally well executed to the tune of phonograph record selections.

FINANCIAL DRIVE FOR SALVATION ARMY HERE

Committee Named to Sponsor The Appeal For Funds

TRUST CO. TREASURER

The Salvation Army in Southeastern Pennsylvania and South New Jersey has opened an appeal for funds for the maintenance of its work in this division.

The following local committee is sponsoring the appeal and asking everyone by contributing to the fund, to aid this worthy organization, which has gained the title of "Everybody's Friend":

Mrs. Horace H. Burton, chairman; Mrs. Thomas G. Hawkes, Minot J. Hill, Mrs. Armand V. Morris and Hugh B. Eastburn.

An organization which in its Nation wide activities secured jobs for 189,372 persons, gave meals to 3,629,342 people, secured beds for 1,245,165 unfortunate men and women, admitted 8,435 wayward girls to their Rescue Homes and Maternity Hospitals with $5 per cent permanently restored, spent 56,090 hours in prison visitation and aided 24,517 prisoners on their discharge and found situations for them deserves the support of all good people.

The local committee feels that the citizens of Bristol and vicinity will respond generously to this appeal. The Bristol Trust Co. is the treasurer of the Local Committee.

In this Division of its work alone the Salvation Army maintains 59 agencies to carry on its work as follows:

- 28 Evangelistic Posts
- 5 Men's Social Service Institutions
- 1 Girls Rescue Home and Maternity Hospital
- 1 Orphanage
- 1 Settlement and Day Nursery
- 1 Fresh Air Camp
- 1 Prison Department

The "garden" episode included participant groups: May Pole girls, butterflies and bees, the four winds, raindrops, and the following groups of flowers: Sunflowers, iris, hollyhocks, daisies, forget-me-nots, sweet peas, sunbeams. Sprinklers, planters, diggers also took part.

Following the planting of the seed after the diggers had done their portion of the work, the rain and sun visited the spot. The flowers were then seen appearing. They received a visit from the bees and butterflies; and finally the winds appeared, making the flowers sway to and fro.

For the several group dance numbers the musical selections were given as follows: Procession, "March of the Mitten Men"; diggers, "Swedish Folk Dance"; planters, "The Velvet Lady"; sprinklers, "Norwegian Mountain March"; sunshine, "Rhythms for Children"; flowers, "Spring Song"; raindrops, "Armoryllis"; flowers, (growing) "Narcissus"; winds, "Rhythms for Children"; bees, "The Bees"; butterflies, "Narcissus"; May Pole dance, "To My Sister."

A solo dance by Miss Peggy Williams, also pleased.

One of the high-lights of the program was the well-executed May Pole dance, in which a number of young women participated. Their white costumes, with the orchid and yellow ribbons extending from the pole made a colorful scene.

EBERHARDT'S ATTORNEY DENIES ALLEGATIONS

Says Client Never Made Such Threats As Wife Charges

NO LOCAL ACTION

Strong denial was made today of allegations made in papers filed in a divorce suit by Mrs. M. L. Eberhardt, Detroit, Michigan, against her husband, Charles, who is a resident of Bristol.

In her action for separation from her husband Mrs. Eberhardt alleges that he made dangerous threats such as: "You will wake up some morning at the bottom of the river with a stone tied around your neck."

The former Bristol woman also charges that police were called to quiet a disturbance caused by Eberhardt when he tried to batter down the door of a neighbor's house into which Mrs. Eberhardt fled, after violence had been threatened by her husband.

Eberhardt's denial today came through his attorney, I. Louis Rubin, and was issued from Rubin's Bristol office.

Rubin's statement in behalf of his client is supported by a statement from Chief Linford J. Jones, Bristol police.

Attorney Rubin's statement reads as follows: "In your issue of May 16, 1931, you printed an article coming from Detroit, Michigan, involving certain threats made by my client against his wife."

"Please be advised that there is absolutely no foundation to the statements made by Mrs. Eberhardt with reference to the treatment she received at the hands of her husband."

"The Police Department denies that they were ever called to quiet any disturbances caused by Mr. Eberhardt or that they have, on any occasion, had any trouble with Mr. Eberhardt."

"It is to be noted that Mrs. Eberhardt did not institute suit in Bucks County, where the alleged wrongs were suffered, but went to Detroit, Michigan, and probably hoped that her allegations would never be seen by her husband. There is no suit pending in Bucks County."

"There is no petition by Mrs. Eberhardt in the Courts of Bucks County for the custody of the son, Charles, Jr., and the Courts of Detroit have no right to award custody of the son to Mrs. Eberhardt."

"The real facts in the case are that Mrs. Eberhardt deserted her husband, without provocation and without any notice, leaving her child locked out on the street, and that when Mr. Eberhardt returned from work he was compelled to look around the streets for his son and to force his way into the house. Mr. Eberhardt, never on any occasion, threatened his wife; he always supported her, and she left him without any cause or reason."

Statement of Chief Jones follows:

"Bristol, Pa., May 18, 1931."

"To whom it may concern: "This is to certify that Charles Eberhardt has resided in this city all his life, and he has never been arrested, and he has never been in trouble of any kind whatever."

"(Signed) LINFORD J. JONES, Chief of Police."

D. A. R. Members Report On The National Congress

DOYLESTOWN, May 20.—Reports of delegates and alternates to the 40th Continental Congress of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, recently held in Washington, D. C., were given by the representatives of the local chapter at their meeting held Monday at the home of Mrs. Isaac J. Vanartsdalen.

Mrs. Samuel Paxson, in her report of the National Congress, stated that she was particularly impressed with the executive ability of the personnel. She said that at the expiration of the reports of the state regents to whom three minutes were allotted there remained three minutes due to the fact that one regent did not report; also, that $1,164,000 was received without apparent solicitation.

Mrs. Effrig reported that the Daughters were no longer a national organization since reports were read from regents of chapters in France, England, China, Cuba and the Philippines.

Mrs. Harriet W. Tomb announced at the close of the business session a supper to be given at the Bucks County Country Club, Langhorne, in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Red Cross.

Mrs. Herman Barnsley reported that the plan to dedicate the marker on the Thompson-Neely house on Memorial Day had been postponed due to the celebration at Valley Forge on the same day.

"Our Early Local Executives," what constituted the personnel, how it functioned and what part it plays in our present system of government, was portrayed in a paper prepared and read by Mrs. Warren S. Ely.

Judge Keller Reconsiders Sentence of Mrs. Griest

DOYLESTOWN, May 20.—Reconsidering her sentence of one to three years in the Bucks County Prison for shooting her husband in their home at Trevoze Heights, Judge Hiram H. Keller yesterday sentenced Mrs. Helen Griest, thirty-four, to the State Industrial Home for Women at Muncy, Pa. Mrs. Griest was removed to that institution yesterday.

The woman pleaded guilty in court to a charge of shooting her husband while he was getting dressed one morning. She told the court that she had just undergone several serious operations before the shooting and had purchased the gun originally to kill herself.

MARION ELLIS, WHO TURNED STATE'S WITNESS IN GAMILS MURDER CASE, ENTERS A PLEA OF GUILTY TODAY

Court Adjourned in Tagg's Case, Before Imposing Sentence, Pending Arraignment of Ellis Today

New Compositions Planned For Fathers' Concert

Many new compositions and novelties have been arranged for the first public subscription concert to be presented by the Fathers' Association Orchestra under the leadership of the director, R. Joseph Martini, at the auditorium of the Bristol M. E. Church on the evening of May 26th at 8.15. The orchestra will present a program that will long linger in the memory of the audience. As soloists there will be a number of the orchestra personnel.

Due to the remarkable interest shown in the organization the director states that the orchestra will give the finest concert that has ever been heard in Bristol.

The members of the orchestra and the director wish to acknowledge their deep appreciation to Stanford K. Runyon, the founder of the organization, for his unceasing efforts to help make the orchestra a success; also to the members of the Fathers' Association and the public which has shown great interest since the founding of the orchestra.

EDGELY GIRL WINS HONORS AT MARBLES

Miss Jane Koch Wins Over Representative of The Second Ward

RECEIVES CUP TODAY

Jane Koch, Edgely, captured the marble honors last evening when she defeated Ruth Rothenberger, second ward, at Leedom's field at seven o'clock.

Miss Koch will be presented with the silver cup awarded to the champion girl marble shooter of Bristol section at the Riverside Theatre this afternoon at 3.30.

The Koch-Rothenberger game followed the contest between Miss Rothenberger and Barbara Lynch, of the sixth ward. This game, lost by Miss Lynch, took place at six o'clock.

The girls of Bristol and vicinity are to be guests of Manager Keen of the Riverside Theatre at a motion picture show this afternoon.

Invitations were extended to Mrs. Herbert Hoover and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot by girls of the Fifth Ward, inviting both ladies to attend Girls' Week here.

Both women find it impossible to attend and have written, as follows:

Communication to Mrs. Emma McEuen from Mrs. Hoover's secretary: "Mrs. Hoover much regrets that she cannot accept your invitation to participate in Bristol Girls' Week but there are so many official engagements demanding her here that she cannot leave Washington except when accompanying the President."

"Mrs. Hoover sends her greetings and best wishes for a successful and happy week."

"Yours sincerely,

"MILDRED HALL,"

"Secretary to Mrs. Hoover."

Communication to Mrs. Emma McEuen from Mrs. Gifford Pinchot: "I wish that I could come to Bristol to the Girls' Week between May 17 and May 23 but unfortunately I have engagements for every one of those days."

"Thanking you for your courtesy in extending to me this invitation, believe me

"Sincerely yours,

"CORNELIA BRYCE PINCHOT."

Despite the fact General Dunlap and Briand were instantly killed, Mademoiselle Briand was believed to have escaped with only minor injuries.

Chicago, May 20. — John ("Jake the Barber") Factor, surrendered to Federal authorities here on the charge of engineering a confidence game which is alleged to have swindled English investors of several million dollars.

DOYLESTOWN, May 20.—Marion Ellis, 21, of Lancaster, S. C., today entered a plea of guilty in court here in connection with the slaying of Edward Gamils, 44, during a hold-up at the Blue Spruce Inn near Trevoze last February 14.

Judges Calvin S. Boyer and Hiram H. Keller presiding in the case postponed sentence until next Monday morning at 10 o'clock pending a study of the facts in the case.

Ellis' plea brings to an end the trial in the sensational shooting of Gamils, who sought to resist a hold-up at the hands of Ellis and William C. Snipes, who was found guilty by a jury which recommended the death penalty and John Tagg, Jr., 21, who pleaded guilty yesterday.

Immediately after Ellis' plea, counsel for the prosecution moved that the court record the testimony taken in the Snipes trial be admitted as defense in the case. The request was granted by the court.

Ellis, a youthful cotton mill worker took the stand and told the court the story of his past life on a South Carolina farm at Lancaster. He told the court he had only attended school until the 6th grade, when he began work on a cotton plantation at the age of 15. The defendant admitted that in 1926 he and Snipes had been arrested for transporting a stolen automobile in interstate commerce from Charlotte, N. C., to Charleston, S. C. For this offense he said, he served three years at the Federal National Training School at Washington, D. C., while Snipes was sentenced to serve an equal term in Sing Sing. Snipes escaped from prison but was recaptured in New York a short time later, Ellis revealed.

After moving to Philadelphia, Ellis related he and Snipes were the victims of another altercation with the law there about a year ago, both were placed on parole at the time.

Attorney Mark Thatcher, counsel for Ellis, made a fervent plea to the court for mercy for the youthful defendant. He pointed out to the two jurists that the Ellis testimony in the Snipes case was of great aid to the Commonwealth and requested that in no event, should Ellis' penalty be greater than life imprisonment.

DOYLESTOWN, May 20.—Marion Ellis, 21, Philadelphia, today was to be arraigned here on charges of first degree murder in connection with the slaying of Edward Gamils, 44, during a hold-up of his Blue Spruce Inn near Trevoze last February 14th, for which William C. Snipes has already been found guilty by a jury which recommended the death penalty and to which John Tagg, Jr., 21, yesterday pleaded guilty.

Slashes Both Wrists; Despondent Over Illness

Despondent because of his continued illness is believed to have been the cause for David Webb, 59, taking his life early today. Webb slashed both wrists with a safety razor blade, according to Deputy Coroner W. Furman Young.

The man was found by his boarding mistress, Mrs. Moore, 538 Swain street, with whom he had made his home for the past 15 years. It is believed that he died some time between two o'clock and daylight.

For quite some time Webb had been a sufferer with tuberculosis of the throat and had been confined to his bed since Easter Sunday. Previous to that time he had been in both the University and Hahnemann hospitals in Philadelphia.

The survivors are three brothers and two daughters.

The deceased was a native of Medford, N. J. He was employed for a number of years at the Grundy mill.

FUTURE GENERATIONS PAY

President Hoover's recent summary of the high cost of warfare and preparedness draws a final and apt chapter from General Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' relief.

This chapter opens with a recital of the fact that the Government has distributed $1,000,000,000 under the new bonus bill and that by 1953 veterans' relief will have cost the Federal Government $21,000,000,000.

He anticipates a pension for all World War veterans such as are paid to Civil War veterans, although the wartime war risk insurance and the more recent adjusted compensation policies were given the veterans with the understanding that they would be in lieu of a pension.

When the United States entered the war it remembered how former wars had burdened the country under the pension system and sought to ease the burden of future generations through war risk insurance and a scientific system of deferred compensation. Now it appears that these well-laid plans have served only to saddle the taxpayers with an added burden, for it is quite generally taken for granted that pensions for all World War veterans are not far off. General Hines is among those in high places who believe the nation will have to face the problem of pensions for the veterans of 1917 and 1918.

This future would not be so dark if the pension dollars were to come from those who made millions from the war, instead of from generations that may have only a vague idea as to wherein they benefited from the war.

POSTAL DEFICIT GROWS

Back of the postoffice department's concern over postal rates and subsidies is a probable deficit of $140,000,000 at the end of the current fiscal year. The deficit last year was a little less than $100,000,000, so a condition the department termed "bad" a year ago has gone from bad to worse.

Fifty millions of the deficit are due to loss of business through the depression. Postal revenues fell off that much without any reduction in personnel; the president's unemployment policy forbidding such reduction as long as millions of other workers were idle. It is unlikely that this particular item will be subject to public protest.

It is well for the department to be concerned over the large and growing deficits of the postal service, but let it not concern itself with what the taxpayers think of these deficits.

All that the public asks of this Government agency is an efficient mail service at the lowest possible cost. It is more interested in low postal rates than in balanced books. If the department can convince the taxpayers that it is giving them a hundred cents worth of service for every dollar of revenue, deficits will not be counted against it.

Would it not be better for the postmaster general and his assistants to stress the importance of low postal rates than the size of postal deficits, since the real purpose of Government operation of the mails is to make possible continuous and cheap communication between the American people?

Dave Ordway finds love and adventure when his plane crashes in the orange groves owned by beautiful Joan Marbury. He loves Joan but her reserve is impervious. Her cousin, Sally, however, is obviously in love with Dave. Gerry Flemming, Talbot Henderson and Barbara Holmeyer, Dave's former fiancée, visit him. Barbara is hostile toward the girls. Under cover of darkness, Dave leaves, with Gerry and Talbot, to even a score against Mueller, neighboring plantation owner, who in reality is Snatch Cazzoni, a bootlegger. Mueller tried to force his attentions upon Joan and also robbed Dave and destroyed his plane. Planning to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's the boys come upon a hangar containing four planes, and also discover a liquor-cutting plant. Figures loom in the darkness. Dave grapples with the nearest one. It is Joan. Unable to resist, they kiss. Heedless of danger, the girls had followed but are ordered back. On the way, Barbara, in revenge, pretends to hear Dave calling Joan. Joan goes back in search of him accompanied only by her colored mammy. Mueller finds them. At the plantation, Sally and Talbot cannot understand Barbara's nervousness. Barbara, repentant, confesses to Sally. Gerry returns alone. He and Talbot go in search of Joan. Just then Dave soars overhead in a plane. Sally and Barbara motion frantically toward Mueller's then Joan in the search. One of Mueller's men, clinging to the plane as Dave steals it, is pried loose.

CHAPTER XXX.

RELIEVED of its dragging burden, the monoplane leaped ahead. A jagged hole appeared in the wing just above Dave's forehead. He looked astern. The guard was kneeling, aiming for a second shot. Dave hunched his shoulders and waited. Too soon to pull the ship off. She'd just sag in the air and pancake into the trees. He'd just have to sit there and take it. The slug from the shotgun snapped past like the cracking of a whiplash. The glass dial on the altimeter splintered into a thousand bits. Too close, that.

The plane's tail was up. The wheels were bouncing on the uneven ground with rapid-fire jolts. The black edge of the orange grove was rushing toward the ship like an express train. Dave pulled back on the joy stick. The bow rose instantly. The little ship shot upward at a dizzy angle, leaving the citrus groves far beneath her fat balloon tires. It thundered up through the night sky, a thing throbbing with life, alert, responsive to his slightest pressure on the controls.

Flying High.

He threw her over on her beam ends, gliding in the sudden lurch of the black-and-silver horizon beyond the stubby cylinders of the radial engine. Cutting a wide, swinging circle around the clearing, he stared down at the long apron of white light from the hangar door. The cool air swept back against his face in a steady, fluid-like stream which seemed to wash his brain clear of the turmoil that had possessed it these past few hours. It seemed to give strength to his battered muscles, to ease the aches which had racked him ever since Mueller had kicked him into unconsciousness three nights ago, that evening of his first dinner with Joan and Sally. He gulped deep of the sweet air, realizing how good it was to fly again.

Now he was hurtling straight over the parallelogram of blackness that was the hangar roof. As he gazed down at the patch of light that spread out in front of it, he suddenly stiffened in surprise. From the wide-mouthed entrance slid the whirling propeller and the flame-spitting engine of another plane, a duplicate of that in which he sat. So they were going to chase him, eh? He laughed aloud. It fitted in with his mood exactly. He'd give them a merry little whirl before he headed back toward the West Coast and civilization.

Peering Earthward.

But he must first signal to the girls, and to Gerry and Talbot. They would be worrying about him if he did not appear before long. And then the violent, adventure-loving Gerry would blunder off looking for him and probably bump straight into Mueller and his gang of professional thugs. Dave turned southward and steered his ship over the precise rows of trees that glinted in the moonlight as if their leaves had been hammered out of coin silver. The dignified bulk of the old plantation house stood in the little clearing by the black ribbon of the county road, its lighted windows cheerful and hospitable. He hoped that his friends would be on the front lawn, where he could wave down at them and, perhaps, shut off his engine and shout to them to hurry on to St. Petersburg.

The thin beams of an automobile's headlights suddenly sprang into being directly in front of the house. That, he thought, would be Gerry's car, ready to start away. He hoped that the boys had persuaded Joan and Sally to go with them. But as his little plane fled over the groves he saw the headlights swivel around until they pointed back toward the abandoned village of Cathay. They slid ahead, passed along the uneven road and were extinguished by the overhanging boughs of trees as completely as if some invisible monster had gulped them down in one gargantuan mouthful.

Dave stared incredulously at the spot where the lights had been. Why should a car be traveling toward Cathay instead of away from it? St. Petersburg was toward the west, not toward the east. Surely that could be no other car than Gerry's. He shoved forward on the control stick, nosing down into a long power glide. As he increased his forward speed, could it have been, he wondered anxiously, Mueller's truck taking the plantation house in a flank attack? Where, then, were Gerry and Talbot? Something was very wrong.

The roof of the old house swept up at the careening plane. The tires on the little wheels almost flicked the ridgepole. That dark spot beside the road was Joan's Ford. But the long, graceful Hispano-Suiza was not there. Dave almost jerked the joystick out of its socket as he whirled his ship around in a terrific vertical bank.

There were two girls upon the lawn. They flashed beneath the cockpit, the warm glow from the lighted windows of the house outlining their figures clearly against the black earth. He saw Sally and Barbara standing there, their upturned faces pale white ovals in the moonlight. Their arms were rigidly outstretched, pointing down the road after the car which had vanished beneath the trees. Pointing toward Cathay. Sally and Barbara alone. Joan was not with them, nor Gerry, nor Talbot.

Dave saw a scraggy turpentine pine reaching up to spear the fragile wings of his thundering plane. Without conscious effort he threw his weight upon the controls, lifting her bow straight into the air like the head of a bucking broncho. The thought flashed through his mind that he had but one chance in a thousand of avoiding those skeleton-like branches. But in the next instant the little ship was clear, dragging her wheels through the outstretched twigs as she soared up to safety.

Around, then, back over the kumquat grove and the lawn, to be perfectly sure that Sally and Barbara were alone. Dave scanned beneath the wheels like a mighty ribbon of black and silver shadows. Dave did not see them. He saw only those two lonely girls, standing there in front of the house, still pointing toward Cathay.

The monoplane hurdled the on-rushing roof and pointed toward Cathay as if of its own volition. Across groves, scrubland and jungle it pounded, its throbbing engine in tune with Dave's thumping heart. Beneath the outstretched boughs of the trees were two long slivers of light, creeping ahead at a snail's pace. Then they were beneath the roaring plane. Beneath and astern. But between the interstices of the branches Dave had glimpsed but two heads instead of three. Where was Joan? It did not occur to him that Gerry or Talbot might be missing. Something told him that Joan was gone and he did not question his intuition.

Back To The Jungle.

Over there, to the left, was the gaunt skeleton of a huge, sprawling building. That, he decided was the unfinished hotel. Just beyond a long, single-storied structure faced a wide expanse of what might once have been golf links. Now the jungle was swallowing them up. The greens were covered by growing things, the hazards obliterated by the rank vegetation. On the other side of the country club was a back of stores. The steady light of the moon revealed their Spanish architecture and, too, their tileless roofs. Broken windows glittered from their facades; shattered glass winked up at the cabbage palms and palmettos that were growing through cracks in the sidewalk.

Here, a hundred yards to the right, was the little clump of houses where the liquor had been stored. Bright lights were darting about beneath the trees. Dave plummeted down on the jungle-submerged dwellings like an avenging angel. The irregular blotches of shadows were confusing. The beams of the flashlights, started from nowhere and ended nowhere. He found his automatic—Joan's automatic—already in his hand. But how was he to know where to shoot? If Joan were somewhere down there his bullets might smash through her flesh and bone instead of finding their mark in the body of one of those cut-throat gangsters.

WHAT IS A MORE PROFITABLE WAY THAN SECURING SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE COURIER AND CAPITALIZING ON THE BIG VOTES FOR THE NECESSARY CREDITS TO WIN ONE OF THESE BIG BAGS OF GOLD THAT WILL SOON BE AWARDED LIVE HUSTLERS IN THIS MAMMOTH FREE GOLD GIFT ELECTION. THE TIME FOR WINNING IS GROWING SHORTER AND SHORTER AS THE DAYS RAPIDLY PASS AND ALMOST BEFORE YOU KNOW IT THE BIG SECOND PERIOD VOTE POSSIBILITIES WILL HAVE PASSED BEYOND RECALL.

Every hour is of vital importance to your success in the short time that remains. Only a few days of the second period left.

This Chest of Gold will be given away as follows: To the candidate securing the greatest number of Points in subscriptions between now and closing, Monday night, June 1st, the close of the third period.

—EXTENSIONS—

Extension subscriptions are proving a harvest for some of the more live candidates these days. For instance, a subscription extended from one to six years carries votes totaling 442,000 (clubs extra). While it is true that NEW subscriptions count the most, it is also true that hundreds of thousands of votes can be accrued by carefully going over the list of those who have previously aided you in the race and securing an extension of a year or more.

ONLY A FEW HOURS REMAIN and opportunity will be gone forever. Only a few hours in which to garner a winning vote total. Realizing the shortness of the time that remains, and the tremendous vote value of these few remaining hours, candidates are hustling with might and main to collect every available subscription before the fatal hour of 10 o'clock next Monday night. Candidates are to be congratulated on the stick-to-it-iveness and determination that has been evidenced on most every hand. After all, dogged determination and perseverance are the essentials that win in any battle. The efforts and diligence of the candidates these past few days should be crowned with an avalanche of thousands of votes. This is the time for candidates to hurl themselves into the fray. This last week of the big votes gives promise of being the biggest of the entire campaign. Everyone seems determined to have their prize as big as possible and to accomplish this goal necessitates taking full advantage of the present vote possibilities. It is a fight to the finish now, and the laggard will fall by the wayside while the most aggressive will pull out in front and capture the valuable and attractive prizes.

New Subscriptions Count the Greatest Number of Votes

Do you realize that only a little over two weeks of the campaign remain? And that the Second Period ends Monday night? And the next question of importance is what are you going to do with this short time that remains? Winning candidates are not going to waste it, let it slip by and regret it afterwards. Idlers do not win the big prizes in this campaign, but there is yet time to forge ahead into the working class and claim any one of the prizes offered.

NEW subscriptions are of greatest vote value. During the second period new subscriptions carry a bonus vote of 30,000 extra votes per year, 60,000 for a two-year and 90,000 for a three-year. After the close of the second period, only 20,000 extra will be credited. Not only is there a material reduction in the extra votes for new but there is also a big decrease in the shedule of votes. With this thought in mind it is highly imperative that extra effort be put forth this short period. NOW a one-year new subscription would credit 38,000 votes while in the third period only 25,000 (clubs extra). A six-year NEW subscription NOW will earn 470,000 credits while in the final period only 160,000 (clubs extra).

A little more than two weeks of the Campaign remain. In a very short time this stupendous list of awards will be made. To hesitate now might spell defeat. This period IS important. Every DAY is important — almost before we know it, this Second Period and its vote possibilities will be over—and then there will remain but one short week before the period of the sealed ballot box will terminate this great election.

Here's How You Can Win The
Prize Of Your Choice

50—Renewal 1 year subscriptions 400,000
If these are NEW add 30,000 for each year 1,500,000
This constitutes nine Clubs of $18 each 900,000

FUTURE GENERATIONS PAY

President Hoover's recent summary of the high cost of warfare and preparedness draws a final and apt chapter from General Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' relief.

This chapter opens with a recital of the fact that the Government has distributed $1,000,000,000 under the new bonus bill and that by 1953 veterans' relief will have cost the Federal Government $21,000,000,000.

He anticipates a pension for all World War veterans such as are paid to Civil War veterans, although the wartime war risk insurance and the more recent adjusted compensation policies were given the veterans with the understanding that they would be in lieu of a pension.

When the United States entered the war it remembered how former wars had burdened the country under the pension system and sought to ease the burden of future generations through war risk insurance and a scientific system of deferred compensation. Now it appears that these well-laid plans have served only to saddle the taxpayers with an added burden, for it is quite generally taken for granted that pensions for all World War veterans are not far off. General Hines is among those in high places who believe the nation will have to face the problem of pensions for the veterans of 1917 and 1918.

This future would not be so dark if the pension dollars were to come from those who made millions from the war, instead of from generations that may have only a vague idea as to wherein they benefited from the war.

POSTAL DEFICIT GROWS

Back of the postoffice department's concern over postal rates and subsidies is a probable deficit of $140,000,000 at the end of the current fiscal year. The deficit last year was a little less than $100,000,000, so a condition the department termed "bad" a year ago has gone from bad to worse.

Fifty millions of the deficit are due to loss of business through the depression. Postal revenues fell off that much without any reduction in personnel, the president's unemployment policy forbidding such reduction as long as millions of other workers were idle. It is unlikely that this particular item will be subject to public protest.

It is well for the department to be concerned over the large and growing deficits of the postal service, but let it not concern itself with what the taxpayers think of these deficits.

All that the public asks of this Government agency is an efficient mail service at the lowest possible cost. It is more interested in low postal rates than in balanced books. If the department can convince the taxpayers that it is giving them a hundred cents worth of service for every dollar of revenue, deficits will not be counted against it.

Would it not be better for the postmaster general and his assistants to stress the importance of low postal rates than the size of postal deficits, since the real purpose of Government operation of the mails is to make possible continuous and cheap communication between the American people?

Dave Ordway finds love and adventure when his plane crashes in the orange groves owned by beautiful Joan Marbury. He loves Joan but her reserve is impervious. Her cousin, Sally, however, is obviously in love with Dave. Gerry Flemming, Talbot Henderson and Barbara Holworthy, Dave's former fiancée, visit him. Barbara is hostile to ward the girls. Under cover of darkness, Dave leaves with Gerry and Talbot, to even a score against Mueller, neighboring plantation owner, who in reality is Snatcher Cazzoni, a bootlegger. Mueller tried to force his attentions upon Joan and also robbed Dave and destroyed his plane. Planning to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's the boys come upon a hangar containing four planes, and also discover a liquor-cutting plant. Figures loom in the darkness. Dave grapples with the nearest one. It is Joan. Unable to resist, they kiss. Heedless of danger, the girls had followed but are ordered back. On the way, Barbara, in revenge, pretends to hear Dave calling Joan. Joan goes back in search of him accompanied only by her colored mammy. Mueller finds them. At the plantation, Sally and Talbot cannot understand Barbara's nervousness. Barbara, repentant, confesses to Sally. Gerry returns alone. He and Talbot go in search of Joan. Just then Dave soars overhead in a plane. Sally and Barbara motion frantically toward Mueller's, then join in the search. One of Mueller's men, clinging to the plane as Dave steals it, is pried loose.

CHAPTER XXX.

RELIEVED of its dragging burden, the monoplane leaped ahead. A jagged hole appeared in the wing just above Dave's forehead. He looked astern. The guard was kneeling, aiming for a second shot. Dave hunched his shoulders and waited. Too soon to pull the ship off. She'd just sag in the air and pancake into the trees. He'd just have to sit there and take it. The slugs from the shotgun snapped past like the cracking of a whip. The glass dial on the altimeter splintered into a thousand bits. Too close, that.

The plane's tail was up. The wheels were bouncing on the uneven ground with rapid-fire jolts. The black edge of the orange grove was rushing toward the ship like an express train. Dave pulled back on the joy stick. The bow rose instantly. The little ship shot upward at a dizzy angle, leaving the citrus groves far beneath her fat balloon tires. It thundered up through the night sky, a thing throbbing with life, alert, responsive to his slightest pressure on the controls.

Flying High.

He threw her over on her beam ends, gliding in the sudden lurch of the black-silver horizon beneath the stubby cylinders of the radial engine. Cutting a wide, swinging circle around the clearing, he stared down at the long apron of white light from the hangar door. The cool air swept back against his face in a steady, fluidlike stream which seemed to wash his brain clear of the turmoil that had possessed it these past few hours. It seemed to give strength to his battered muscles, to ease the aches which had racked him ever since Mueller had kicked him into unconsciousness three nights ago, that evening of his first dinner with Joan and Sally. He gulped deep of the sweet air, realizing how good it was to fly again.

Now he was hurtling straight over the parallelogram of blackness that was the hangar roof. As he gazed down at the patch of light that spread out in front of it, he suddenly stiffened in surprise. From the wide-mouthed entrance slid the whirling propeller and the flame-spitting engine of another plane, a duplicate of that in which he sat. So they were going to chase him, eh? He laughed aloud. It fitted in with his mood exactly. He'd give them a merry little whirl before he headed back toward the West Coast and civilization.

Peering Earthward.

But he must first signal to the girls, and to Gerry and Talbot. They would be worrying about him if he did not appear before long. And then the violent, adventure-loving Gerry would blunder off bumping straight into Mueller and his gang of professional thugs. So Dave turned southward and steered his ship over the precise rows of trees that glinted in the moonlight as if their leaves had been hammered out of coin silver. The dignified bulk of the old plantation house stood in the little clearing by the black ribbon of the county road, its lighted windows cheerful, warm and hospitable. He hoped that his friends would be on the front lawn, where he could wave down at them and, perhaps, shut off his engine and shout to them to hurry on to St. Petersburg.

The thin beams of an automobile's headlights suddenly sprang into being directly in front of the house. That, he thought, would be Gerry's car, ready to start away. He hoped that the boys had persuaded Joan and Sally to go with them. But as his little plane flew over the groves he saw the headlights swivel around until they pointed back toward the abandoned village of Cathay. They slid ahead, passed along the uneven road and were extinguished by the overhanging boughs of trees as completely as if some invisible monster had gulped them down in one gargantuan mouthful.

Dave stared incredulously at the spot where the lights had been. Why should a car be traveling toward Cathay instead of away from it? St. Petersburg was toward the west, not toward the east. Surely that could be no other car than Gerry's. He shoved forward on the control stick, nosing down into a long power-glide to increase his forward speed. Could it have been, he wondered anxiously, Mueller's truck taking the plantation house in a flank attack? Where, then, were Gerry and Talbot? Something was very wrong.

The roof of the old house swept up at the careening plane. The tires on the little wheels almost flicked the ridgepole. That dark spot beside the road was Joan's Ford. But the long, graceful Hispano-Suiza was not there. Dave almost jerked the joystick out of its socket as he whirled his ship around in a terrific vertical bank.

There were two girls upon the lawn. They flashed beneath the cockpit, the warm glow from the lighted windows of the house outlining their figures clearly against the black earth. He saw Sally and Barbara standing there, their upturned faces pale white ovals in the moonlight. Their arms were rigidly outstretched, pointing down the road after the car which had vanished beneath the trees. Pointing toward Cathay. Sally and Barbara alone. Joan was not with them, nor Gerry, nor Talbot.

Dave saw a scraggy turpentine pine reaching up to spear the fragile wings of his thundering plane. Without conscious effort he threw his weight upon the controls, lifting her bow straight into the air like the neck of a bucking broncho. The thought flashed through his mind that he had but one chance in a thousand of avoiding those skeleton-like branches. But in the next instant the little ship was clear, dragging her wheels through the outstretched twigs as she soared up to safety.

Around, then, back over the kumquat grove and the lawn, to be perfectly sure that Sally and Barbara were alone. Trees rushed beneath the wheels like a mighty ribbon of black and silver shadows. Dave did not see them. He saw only those two lonely girls, standing there in front of the house, still pointing toward Cathay.

The monoplane hurdled the on-rushing roof and pointed toward Cathay as if of its own volition. Across groves, scrubland and jungle it pounded, its throbbing engine in tune with Dave's thumping heart. Beneath the outstretched boughs of the trees were two long slivers of light, creeping ahead at a snail's pace. Then they were beneath the roaring plane. Beneath and astern. But between the interstices of the branches Dave had glimpsed but two heads in the front seat. Two heads instead of three. Where was Joan? It did not occur to him that Gerry or Talbot might be missing. Something told him that Joan was gone and he did not question his intuition.

Back To The Jungle.

Over there, to the left, was the gaunt skeleton of a huge, sprawling building. That, he decided was the unfinished hotel. Just beyond a long, single-storied structure faced a wide expanse of what might once have been golf links. Now the jungle was swallowing them up. The greens were covered by growing things, the hazards obliterated by the rank vegetation. On the other side of the country club was a block of stores. The steady light of the moon revealed their Spanish architecture and, too, their tileless roofs. Broken windows glittered from their facades; shattered glass winked up from the cabbage palms and palmettos that were growing through cracks in the sidewalks.

Here, a hundred yards to the right, was the little clump of houses where the liquor had been stored. Bright lights were darting about beneath the trees. Dave plummeted down on the jungle-submerged dwellings like an avenging angel. The irregular blotches of shadows were confusing. The beams of the flashlights started from nowhere and ended nowhere. He found his automatic—Joan's automatic—already in his hand. But how was he to know where to shoot? If Joan were somewhere down there his bullets might smash through her flesh and bone instead of finding their mark in the body of one of those cut-throat gangsters.

ground for their new home directly in front of their old homestead. It will be an "all-American" style house, with every modern convenience. The old homestead was built more than two hundred years ago and will be torn down after the completion of their new abode which they expect to occupy this summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Parish, of Newportville Road, are improving their lawn with a new hedge fence.

Walter Nabel, of Excelsior avenue, and Miss Myrtle Hedenger, of Mayfair, spent the week-end with Miss Hedenger's mother up the state.

Miss Anna Scharg, sponsored the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Kornfeld, of Second avenue, who was baptised Sunday morning at St. Luke's Lutheran Church by Rev. Kohlmeier, pastor.

Mrs. Harry Kenock, of Rosa avenue, and two sons enjoyed Thursday of last week at the Navy Yard, Philadelphia.

The Croydon Girl Scouts left their meeting place Sunday at 7 a. m., and motored to New Hope, where they prepared breakfast and then left for their church services. They also cooked dinner which proved to be very tasty. A delightful day was spent. Chaplones were Captain Brenner and Lieutenant Edna States.

WHAT IS A MORE PROFITABLE WAY THAN SECURING SUBSCRIPTIONS TO THE COURIER AND CAPITALIZING ON THE BIG VOTES FOR THE NECESSARY CREDITS TO WIN ONE OF THESE BIG BAGS OF GOLD THAT WILL SOON BE AWARDED LIVE HUSTLERS IN THIS MAMMOTH FREE GOLD GIFT ELECTION. THE TIME FOR WINNING IS GROWING SHORTER AND SHORTER AS THE DAYS RAPIDLY PASS AND ALMOST BEFORE YOU KNOW IT THE BIG SECOND PERIOD VOTE POSSIBILITIES WILL HAVE PASSED BEYOND RECALL.

Every hour is of vital importance to your success in the short time that remains. Only a few days of the second period left.

This Chest of Gold will be given away as follows: To the candidate securing the greatest number of Points in subscriptions between now and closing, Monday night, June 1st, the close of the third period.

—EXTENSIONS—

Extension subscriptions are proving a harvest for some of the more live candidates these days. For instance, a subscription extended from one to six years carries votes totaling 442,000 (clubs extra). While it is true that NEW subscriptions count the most, it is also true that hundreds of thousands of votes can be accrued by carefully going over the list of those who have previously aided you in the race and securing an extension of a year or more.

ONLY A FEW HOURS REMAIN and opportunity will be gone forever. Only a few hours in which to garner a winning vote total. Realizing the shortness of the time that remains, and the tremendous vote value of these few remaining hours, candidates are hustling with might and main to collect every available subscription before the fatal hour of 10 o'clock next Monday night. Candidates are to be congratulated on the stick-to-it-iveness and determination that has been evidenced on most every hand. After all, dogged determination and perseverance are the essentials that win in any battle. The efforts and diligence of the candidates these past few days should be crowned with an avalanche of thousands of votes. This is the time for candidates to hurl themselves into the fray. This last week of the big votes gives promise of being the biggest of the entire campaign. Everyone seems determined to have their prize as big as possible and to accomplish this goal necessitates taking full advantage of the present vote possibilities. It is a fight to the finish now, and the laggard will fall by the wayside while the most aggressive will pull out in front and capture the valuable and attractive prizes.

New Subscriptions Count the Greatest Number of Votes

Do you realize that only a little over two weeks of the campaign remain? And that the Second Period ends Monday night? And the next question of importance is what are you going to do with this short time that remains? Winning candidates are not going to waste it, let it slip by and regret it afterwards. Idlers do not win the big prizes in this campaign, but there is yet time to forge ahead into the working class and claim any one of the prizes offered.

NEW subscriptions are of greatest vote value. During the second period new subscriptions carry a bonus vote of 30,000 extra votes per year, 60,000 for a two-year and 90,000 for a three-year. After the close of the second period, only 20,000 extra will be credited. Not only is there a material reduction in the extra votes for new but there is also a big decrease in the schedule of votes. With this thought in mind it is highly imperative that extra effort be put forth this short period. NOW a one-year new subscription would credit 38,000 votes while in the third period only 25,000 (clubs extra). A six-year NEW subscription NOW will earn 470,000 credits while in the final period only 160,000 (clubs extra).

A little more than two weeks of the Campaign remain. In a very short time this stupendous list of awards will be made. To hesitate now might spell defeat. This period IS important. Every DAY is important — almost before we know it, this Second Period and its vote possibilities will be over—and then there will remain but one short week before the period of the sealed ballot box will terminate this great election.

Here's How You Can Win The
Prize Of Your Choice

50—Renewal 1 year subscriptions 400,000
If these are NEW add 30,000 for each year 1,500,000
This constitutes nine Clubs of $18 each 900,000

Total Votes—2,800,000

25—Renewal 2 year subscriptions 600,000
If these are NEW add 30,000 for each year 1,500,000
This constitutes nine Clubs of $18 each 900,000

Total Votes—3,000,000

20—Renewal 3 year subscriptions 1,000,000
If these are NEW add 30,000 for each year 1,800,000
This constitutes ten Clubs of $18 each 1,000,000

Total Votes—3,800,000

10—Renewal 6 year subscriptions 2,900,000
If these are NEW add 30,000 for each year 1,800,000
This constitutes ten Clubs of $18 each 2,000,000

Total Votes—6,700,000

Surely this big vote possibility offers any candidate an opportunity of securing a winning vote total—BUT REMEMBER—only a short time remains in which subscriptions can be turned in, and credit be given on this big vote schedule. May 25 is your last opportunity to receive the greatest value for your subscriptions. IT IS NOW OR NEVER!

Howard W. Amell, United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York in a radio broadcast said: "Most gangsters are between the ages of 18 to 25 years and the records show that when these gangsters were questioned they state that they never attended church or Sunday School." Mr. Amell blamed lack of religious training for much of the crime of today. The Salvation Army in its street meetings and in its battle aids in a spiritual way to do its bit toward correcting this evil.

The work of the Salvation Army affects all communities directly or indirectly for good. Very often to the wayward boy or girl from the rural districts is cared for in the large cities by this organization.

Miss Gladys Harper Gives Pleasing Program Here

In connection with the work of the department of temperance and missions, the Bristol W. C. T. U. conducted a most pleasing program in the Travel Club Home last evening.

A splendid treat was in store for local members and those affiliated with the Hulseville W. C. T. U., who had been invited to attend, pictures of Yellowstone Park being shown by Miss Gladys Harper, of Yardley. Miss Harper held the attention of all the women gathered as with the assistance of her father, Jesse Harper, she showed the splendidly colored views of the park, as well as pictures of the Mormon temple and other attractive buildings and sights of Salt Lake City.

In telling of her journey and exploring places visited, Miss Harper drove home the importance of valuing the scenery of this country. As the party was ready to start on the return trip to the East, a cloud-burst occurred, thus delaying the start from the park. It was made necessary for the bus trip to the railway station to be taken during the night, and the most dangerous ride of one and a half hours was accomplished only by the exercising of great care on the part of the driver. Boulders had been hurled to the roadway during the storm, and it was most difficult for the bus operator to hold the vehicle to the narrow thoroughfares as the cliffs were rounded.

Mrs. Lucy Harper, county W. C. T. U. president, and mother of the one showing the pictures, gave a brief address; and remarks were also made by Mr. Harper.

Some business of the local organization was attended to; and at the conclusion of the program refreshments of ice cream and home-made cake were served.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hamm Are Married 25 Years

CROYDON, May 20.—Mr. and Mrs. John C. Hamm celebrated the 25th anniversary of their marriage at their home Saturday evening. The room was prettily decorated with flowers and ferns, and streamers of colored crepe paper. A mock marriage was performed. A delicious supper was served. A beautiful ten-pound wedding cake adorned the center of the table.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamm have a family of four sons and one granddaughter, Freda, who resides at Bristol. Mr. Hamm has served as auditor of Croydon for the past 16 years.

Scouts of Troop 2 Show Improvement During Month

St. James Parish house was the scene of another very successful meeting of Troop No. 2 on Monday evening. David Neill, deputy-commissioner was present to give his monthly inspection, and commended the boys on their attendance and appearance. The troop made a decided improvement over last month, and gained many additional points.

Several visitors were present among whom were H. Wesley Spencer, chairman of the troop committee, and C. R. Ellis, troop committeeman.

Two new recruits were enrolled and a waiting list will soon be started, as this troop has nearly reached the authorized membership.

Scoutmaster John E. Healey, closed the meeting with a request for a moment of silent prayer by all present, for their brother Scout Lawrence McCoy who is in the Harriman Hospital.

Next week will be Funoree night, and boys are asked to prepare for the Funoree to be held in Willow Grove Park on June 24th.

Will Present Operetta At Doylestown Tonight

DOYLESTOWN, May 20.—At the weekly dinner meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Doylestown at the Fountain House last night reports of the delegates to the fifteenth annual convention of Kiwanis International at Miami, Florida, were made by Walter M. Carwithen, president of the club, and Abram L. Kriebel.

Tonight the child welfare committee of the club will present "Tulip Time," an operetta, in the auditorium of the Doylestown High School. The operetta will be staged by the Quakertown Choral Society for the Kiwanis Club.

Joseph A. Ryan Weds Miss Elsie O'Day

Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Smith, of Radcliffe street, announce the marriage of Mrs. Smith's brother, Joseph A. Ryan, of Bristol, to Miss Elsie O'Day, who until six months ago, had been residing in Bristol, and was a member of the local Bell Telephone Company's Exchange but has since lived in Philadelphia.

The ceremony was a quiet affair, performed in St. Mark's Rectory, by Father Baird, a curate of the church.

on Saturday morning.

Miss Mary Roe, of Bristol, was bridesmaid, and Vincent Ryan, brother of the groom, served as best man.

Mrs. Ryan was costumed in a smart dark blue polka dotted silk dress, white hat, white gloves and white shoes. Miss Roe looked chic in a nice green ensemble.

A wedding breakfast, which was attended by the newly-wedded couple, their attendants, and a few members of the family, followed the nuptials, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Ryan then left to spend a short honeymoon in New York. Upon their return, they will reside at 303 Mill street.

Mr. Ryan, who is a native of Bristol, holds the position of manager of the Western Union Telegraph Office.

"Bossy Husband" Is Not Extinct--But Should Be

Winifred Black Meets One of the Species Face to Face
at a Party and He Was in Rare,
Brow-Beating Form, Too.

By WINIFRED BLACK

THERE he was at the party the other night—the bossy husband.

I thought the bossy husband was as out of date as the red-wheeled buggy and spit curls.

But there he was at the party as large as life, and too bossy for words.

His wife is a pretty little thing and she is very intelligent, much more intelligent than her poor, stupid, blundering, slow-witted husband.

Maybe that's what was the matter with husband.

Perhaps he had an "inferiority complex," or whatever it is that induces people to make bossy, bragging, outrageous bores of themselves.

But, anyhow, there he was bossing away as if he was an Indian in a teepee with a squaw for a mate.

And the wife—oh, her big black eyes filled with tears.

Was I sorry for her?

Well, yes, I was—but I wanted to shake her, just the same.

This woman has two grown sons and two grown daughters.

She was left a widow with four little children, and she worked and slaved and sacrificed to bring up those children.

She sent them to good schools, she dressed them well, she fed them comfortably, and then, when they were all on their own feet—the two girls married and the boys in good positions—what did the woman do but step out and marry a widower, a man she had known when she was a girl.

She had not seen the man for years, but she had always been sentimental about him in a vague, old-fashioned sort of way, so she went to the town where the man lived and married him, and there she is, cut off from all her friends, and almost a stranger to her own children.

The two boys have followed their mother to the interior city—but if doesn't do their mother much good for them to be in the same city with her.

The bossy man won't let her see them at all.

He doesn't forbid her outright, but whenever he knows one of the boys is apt to drop in he finds some grand downtown and makes his wife go with him.

He takes his wife to his office daytimes and he takes her to meetings with him at night, so that she won't have a chance to see either of the two boys.

Jealous of them—of course, he is. He is jealous of their youth and their promise and of their own mother's love.

And besides, he wants to show that he is "bossy."

Do you know what I hope? I hope these two sons will come some evening when they are not expected, and I hope one son will get on one side of his mother, and the other will get on the other side, and they will just rush her along to a motor car outside the door and wh-ee-ee-ee—disappear once and for all.

What—separate husband and wife? Well, death can do a little separating, too, and if somebody doesn't rescue that poor little, brow-beaten woman, she won't be on this earth with her husband or anyone else very long.

The bossy husband—why I thought he was as extinct as the dodo. He isn't.

I saw him at the party with my own two eyes.

Helpful Advice to Girls

By NANCY LEE

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am a girl in my teens who is greatly in love with a boy who, when I look at him, turns away or frowns; but when I'm not looking he looks at me pleasantly. How can I win him, I love him so much?

BUBBLES:

BUBBLES: What I want to know is, how is it that when you are not looking at the boy, that you know that he is looking at you so pleasantly? Won't you tell me how you manage this? I would advise you to come down to earth and confine your smiles to boys who aren't bashful and who don't frown at girls—a sure sign of callow youth rather than of rudeness.

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I have been madly in love with a boy for almost two years and I finally succeeded in going with him, but lately he has shunned me, and if we are out together he seems to take more interest in a certain girl than he does in me. Will you please tell me how I can regain his love?

CURLEY LOCKS:

CURLEY LOCKS: Haven't you

realized by now that forced affection is but dead-sea fruit? Even though you did succeed in going out with the young man, it hasn't done you much good. For when he really meets a girl he likes, he will do as all men have always done, take the initiative. You will no doubt use the same tactics as before to try to regain the boy's friendship, but, frankly, I do not think that this will avail you much. And so I would just be sensible and try to find friends who will take me out without being forced into it. Friendship, like charity, should be a voluntary offering.

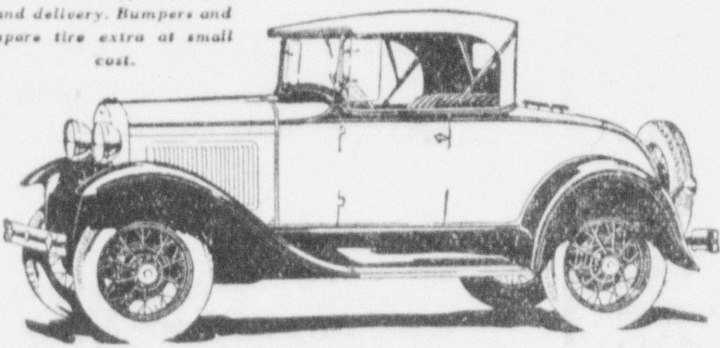

DEAR NANCY LEE:

I am a girl in my teens, and in love with a boy whom I do not know to talk to. I talk about him to my friends, whom he knows, and they tell me that he is in love with me also, knowing this, would you talk to him or wait to be introduced? UNKNOWN LOVER:

UNKNOWN LOVER: Since the young man seems to have discussed you with mutual friends, why not ask them to perform the office of introduction? That surely would be the logical thing to do.

That's how Mary Lou Thurston became involved in this most enthralling situation. Travers Lorrimer, war-shocked veteran, had grieved so long for the bride he had last seen in London that he couldn't be convinced Mary Lou was not she. To help him get back in step with life Mary Lou took up the role of make-believe wife—a role that led to startling complications and grew into a real modern yet winsome love-affair.

"NOW WE ARE THREE!"

KATHERINE and Bill—what fun it is to know them! They seem to get so much out of living. You met them just a little over a year ago—the week before they were married. Ten days later it gave you a pleasant glow of anticipation to receive the trim card telling you when they'd be "at home."

And today you got another card, headed "Now we are three!" Bill's signature comes first, then Katherine's, and then—the guided, chubby scrawl of the newcomer, Jeremy.

You happen to know that although he is in line for an important promotion, Bill's present salary isn't large. Most other young couples would consider themselves "up against it" if they had to manage on so little. Yet Katharine and Bill maintain a standard of living that is the admiration of all their friends.

You know how they do it, for Katherine has told you. They budget all expenditures. And when they decide a purchase is to be made, whether it is a new shade for the reading lamp, or a suit for Bill, or shoes for Katherine, they study the advertisements until they find just what they want for the price they can pay. Careful, budgeted buying of consistently advertised merchandise enables them to get the most out of their dollars.

It's a wise baby that picks parents like these.

HARRIMAN FIELD CLUB DOWNS ST. ANN'S NINE

Schedule for Tonight
St. Ann's versus Independents
Last Night's Results
Harriman, 4; St. Ann's, 3
Independents, 8; Emilie, 7
(By T. M. Juno)

Scoring three runs in its last turn with the stick, the Harriman Field Club downed the St. Ann's nine last night on St. Ann's field. The final count was 4-3.

Going into the last frame the "Saints" held the edge 3-1 and the way Whyno was serving them it looked mighty bad for the boys from the sixth ward. Whyno had only given them two hits, one a home run by David.

Then the fireworks began. With one out, Brooks hit an easy roller to LaRosa, who fumbled the ball; Trotter ran for Brooks; David tapped a short single over second; Morrell singled to center, scoring Trotter and David; Morrell stole second and scored the winning run when Carp plastered a hit to left.

The St. Ann's boys collected six hits from Kohler and had eight players left on the sacks, showing the boys were a failure in a pinch. Both teams played good ball all night. Fields and David led the hitters with two apiece. One of David's hits was a home run to left field, the ball being lost in the tall grass there. Three of the "Saints" hits were for extra bases, all doubles.

The "Saints" tallied a run in the first inning. Fields reached first on Dougherty's error; Gilardi doubled to right, Fields reaching third; Brushia fanned; Lasprella fanned; DiTanna was hit with a pitched ball, filling the sacks; Seneca walked, forcing a run across; Whyno hit to second base and was out.

Another run was scored in the second. With two out, Fields beat out a hit to Wilkinson; Gilardi hit to Morrell, who fumbled; Brushia hit to Dougherty, who also fumbled, allowing Fields to score; Lasprella rolled to Dougherty.

The third St. Ann's run was counted in the fifth. Brushia singled to right; Lasprella fouled out to David; DiTanna doubled to center; LaRosa tapped in front of the plate and Brushia scored; LaRosa was caught off first and DiTanna tried to score and was put out. Kohler to David to Wilkinson to McDevitt to Wilkinson to David; LaRosa went out on the same play, David to Dougherty.

INDEPENDENTS VICTORS OVER EMILIE TEAM

EMILIE, May 20—The Independents won their first game of the Bristol Twilight League here last night by triumphing over the Emilie Y. M. A. by the count of 8-7.

It marked the second consecutive defeat for the home club which has not yet chalked up a victory.

Holland and Watson were the hurriers and both gave a wonderful pitching exhibition. Holland allowed five hits while Watson gave up seven. The support given to the twirlers was poor. The Emilie club had five miscues while the winners had four.

"Sid" Purcell led the hitters with two long doubles to left field. He counted two of the Independents' runs. James Massilla played wonderful defensive ball for the winners while "Benny" Praul's defensive work was outstanding for the losers.

The game was protested by the Emilie management who claimed that there was an error in the scoring of the runs.

Marion Ellis, Who Turned State's Witness in Gamils Case, is Arraigned Today

guilty yesterday but adjourned Court before imposing sentence, pending the arraignment of Ellis today.

Ellis, who turned State's witness during the Snipes' trial named Snipes as the "trigger man" in the hold-up.

Tagg has admitted he was the man who hired the car used in the hold-up of the Inn which he had pointed out to his companions as an "easy" job.

Snipes has not been sentenced pending the hearing of arguments of his counsel's motion for a new trial. Before adjourning yesterday, Tagg's father, who lives in Langhorne, was called to the witness stand. He testified that his son, one of seven children, had always been a good boy and that he had never been arrested before on any charge.

Ellis will be represented by Webster S. Achey, of Doylestown, and Mark Thatcher, of Perkasie, both appointed by the court. Ellis turned State's evidence last Saturday in the Snipes trial.
